Public libraries get people back to work. Support your public library.

Public libraries have helped people reeducate themselves, find jobs and transform their lives for decades, but their role has never been more critical. With high unemployment and many people cutting back on expenses, this critical resource is often the only viable option for active job seekers.

Make sure libraries have the funding they need to maintain and enhance free services that help people find jobs and improve their lives.

Find out how you can help improve public library funding in your community. Your voice matters.
